As I'm sure that most people have figured out, things are changing at AsyncLabs. So instead of beating around the bush, I'll just come out and say it. After much consideration and thought, AsyncLabs will be shutting it's doors. A lot of it boils down to just not having enough time to really devote to AsyncLabs, and what it takes to continue innovating future products for the community. It's something that has been brewing for the past few months, and it's best that we let everybody know instead of just keeping everybody on edge, hoping that we will come out with some more WiShield, BlackWidow, and YellowJacket parts soon.

The website wiki and forums will remain up for the foreseeable future, to help those that would like to use our designs to make parts for themselves. All the parts are still available (the WiFi module is available from Microchip), so there should still be an avenue for people to add WiFi to their designs.

I want to personally thank everybody for the wonderful experience, and the ability to provide a unique part to the community. It really is a part that is desperately needed, and I hope that somebody picks up the torch where we left off. I have no doubt that somebody will make products vastly superior to ours.

I'm sure that at some point in the future I'll be back at this again, tinkering my way to something else interesting, but for now, my family needs some of my attention (as well as my day employer :D).
